POSITIVE CHANGE AND INNOVATION PROPEL CIRI

CIRI CEO SWAMI IYER CHARACTERIZED 2024 AS A YEAR WITH 'A LOT OF CHANGES, AND A LOT OF SUCCESS'

"There wasn't a single area where there wasn't a breakthrough," Swami shared. "Our success is attributable to our employees coming together and supporting one another, knowing that the economic and social well-being of our Shareholders and their families depends on CIRI meeting—and in most cases, exceeding—our goals."

With the acquisition of OSC Edge (OSC) in December, CIRI now has a presence in 45 states and seven countries. A leading IT solutions provider to government and defense organizations, OSC is known for its industry-leading expertise, innovative solutions and commitment to delivering exceptional results. OSC's robust and growing financial performance, strong contract backlog and operational efficiency aligns with CIRI's vision for sustainable, long-term growth.

The company's 300-plus employees—approximately half of whom are veterans of the U.S. military—are committed to delivering global services across the U.S. and in Europe, Southwest Asia and Africa.

"Acquiring OSC is a strategic decision that will drive growth and innovation for both organizations," Swami said.

"We are excited to support and expand on OSC's achievements and look forward to what we can accomplish together."

Other 2024 highlights include hiring and onboarding 30 new CIRI employees; opening a satellite office in Washington, D.C., allowing CIRI to more easily access major markets and resources and pursue federal contracting opportunities; and working toward a shared services model, which consolidates CIRI's support functions and offers greater flexibility across organizations, supports improved reporting and analytics, and aids in information sharing and collaboration.

Robust staffing, a new office location and resources shared across the entire organization—all these innovations contribute to what Swami calls an "enterprise culture."

"It's creating a growth mindset and a shift in how we come up with systems," Swami explained. "Thinking big picture—what does a world-class company look like? Operating on a global scale, telling our story in different ways and engaging at every level of the organization."

"Being a global company also means leaning into our status as an Alaska Native corporation and strengthening our foundation here at home," CIRI Board Chair Doug Fifer added. In 2023, Cook Inlet region leaders identified three region-wide priorities: 1) Protect self-determination, 2) subsistence and subsistence management, and 3) revitalize Alaska Native culture and identity. In 2024, CIRI executives visited each of CIRI's seven villages and met with the Tribes and village corporations in the Cook Inlet region to discuss shared opportunities and goals. These conversations will continue in 2025, with a focus on collaboration and mutuality.

For CIRI Shareholders and Descendants, efforts will be centered on optimizing the CIRI Settlement Trust (CST), offering programs and opportunities that connect at all life stages and across geographies, and enhanced communication plans and initiatives.

"Our 2025 goals are a natural progression in the evolution of the Company's transformation from a passive portfolio to one with several operating companies," Doug shared. "ANCSA mission operations remain a clear focus, with significant resources dedicated to the CST, and we will continue our vital work in government and Tribal relations both in Alaska and beyond."

"Sharpening our focus on key areas that make meaningful improvements remains a priority," Swami said. "I look forward to sharing more with our Shareholders and Descendants at our Information Meetings in April and the Annual Meeting of Shareholders in June." !

A MESSAGE FROM CIRI CEO SWAMI IYER

BUILDING UPON OUR FOUNDATION FOR FUTURE SUCCESS

When I came on as CEO in January 2024, my goal was to enhance the Company’s investment strategy with CIRI’s vision, “our stakeholders thrive,” as our guide.

As you read in our lead story, we accomplished much over the last year, not only achieving but exceeding our goals. A new acquisition, new employees, enhanced technology and increased program offerings made 2024 one for the books! I could not be prouder of our employees, all of whom supported one another as our Company evolved and expanded. Your executive leadership team, staff and Board of Directors are united in our efforts to elevate CIRI’s unique status as a diverse, well-capitalized, Alaska Native-owned corporation. While our roots remain in Alaska, we are now a world-class company with a global reach.

As mentioned in the lead article, at the end of the year, we announced the acquisition of OSC Edge (OSC), a leading provider of IT engineering, integration and testing, and data-management services to government and private-sector businesses. Our Board’s decision to acquire OSC reflects CIRI’s commitment to growth, innovation and creating long-term value for our Shareholders.

We also welcomed Jacinda Mainord and Lexi Trainer as our Yah (Dena’ina for “grow”) Program executives. Designed to identify potential leaders, encourage creativity and innovation, and empower those looking to play a high-level role within the CIRI ecosystem, the Yah Program puts CIRI on the path of being led by its people. I’m excited to grow the program in 2025 and beyond.

This year, our collective focus will be on continued growth and expansion—refreshing our asset portfolio through the disposition of outdated assets and the purchase of newer, more efficient assets; growing our Company through mergers and acquisitions; and creating an enterprise culture, working together for the benefit of our stakeholders.

If 2024 was a year of building momentum and establishing a growth strategy to carry us forward, 2025 will build upon that strategy to sharpen the Company’s focus on key areas that make meaningful improvements. I look forward to sharing more with you in the months ahead!

Best regards,

Swami Iyer

I look forward to talking with our Shareholders, Descendants, and their families at this spring’s Information Meetings and Annual Meeting!”

Tabetha comes to us from Cook Inlet Tribal Council (CITC), one of three CIRI designated Tribal organizations. In her role as chief administrative officer, she provided strategic direction and oversight of CITC’s Tribal relations; focused on communications, capacity-building and partnership development; developed and implemented innovative employee programs and practices; and cultivated stakeholder relationships and partnerships.

As CIRI’s president, Tabetha will lead the Company’s ANCSA mission/operations, spearhead stakeholder engagement, and provide strategic oversight of the Shareholder + Descendant Programs and Corporate Affairs departments.

“We are excited for Tabetha to join the executive leadership team,” said CEO Swami Iyer. “Her empathy for our Shareholders, strong leadership competencies, and deep understanding of the history, importance and priorities of ANCSA will make her an invaluable member of our team.”

Tabetha holds a bachelor’s degree in organizational management from Alaska Pacific University (APU) and a master’s degree in organizational leadership/certificate in servant leadership from Gonzaga University. Her list of professional/community affiliations and volunteer service includes the Alaska Native Heritage Center, APU’s Alaska Native Executive Leadership Program and the Anchorage Economic Development Corporation. The afternoon cohort (ages 14-17) participated in "alumni talks" and a cooking demonstration. In addition to the in-person event held at CIRI's Anchorage office, a virtual option was made available to out-of-area attendees.

SUSTAINABLE CHAGA HARVESTING

Chaga is a mushroom that grows on birch trees in the temperate and boreal forests of the Northern Hemisphere. Unlike typical mushrooms, which have caps and stems, chaga appears as a dark, crusty mass resembling charcoal. This unique fungus can live up to 80 years on its host tree, only producing fruiting bodies after the tree dies, allowing it to thrive for an additional six years.

For centuries, chaga has been an integral part of the cultural and medicinal practices of Indigenous communities around the world. Traditionally harvested in the coldest winter months, chaga mushrooms began attracting attention over the past few decades due to their health benefits. Some early animal and lab studies have shown promising results for strengthening the immune system and reducing inflammation, among other benefits.

Despite its potential benefits, chaga faces a serious threat from overharvesting and commercialization. As demand for this medicinal fungus increases, it is essential to adopt ethical harvesting practices, not only for the chaga itself, but for the birch trees it depends upon.

Here are some key guidelines for responsible and sustainable chaga harvesting:

- 1. Know the land: Always seek permission before harvesting on private or community lands and ensure the ecosystem is healthy.
- 2. Timing matters: The ideal time to forage for chaga is during the coldest months of winter (January through March), when the fungus is most potent.
- 3. Practice selective harvesting: Take only what will be used, leaving behind at least one-third of the chaga mass to allow for regeneration. If the entire chaga is removed from the host tree, the tree will succumb to infection or disease and die. Avoid harvesting chaga that is moldy, shows signs of contamination, or is littered with bugs or larvae.
- 4. Avoid tree damage: Target healthy, living trees and never remove the tree bark during harvest. Avoid harvesting from dead or fallen trees, as the chaga may be contaminated.
- 5. Choose wisely: Harvest chaga the size of a grapefruit or larger, as larger specimens contain higher concentrations of antioxidants and beneficial plant compounds.
- 6. Respect nature: Always approach harvesting with reverence for the tree and the environment, ensuring enough chaga remains for further growth. Chaga is extremely slow growing and can take up to 15 years before reaching a harvestable size.
- 7. Stay clear of contaminated areas: Do not harvest from locations near industrial sites or those showing signs of contamination.

By following these guidelines, we can help preserve this remarkable fungus for future generations while honoring its cultural significance and ecological importance. Responsible chaga harvesting benefits the environment and deepens our connection with nature and the rich traditions of Indigenous communities. As we enjoy the benefits of chaga, let us ensure we do so in a way that respects the delicate balance of our ecosystems and honors the stewardship practices of our Indigenous ancestors. !

A MESSAGE FROM CIRI BOARD DIRECTOR MARGIE BROWN

CIRI sells Killey River acreage for fair value while upholding values of conservation and stewardship

CIRI recently closed on the sale of land on Alaska's Kenai Peninsula. Known as the Killey River land, it is situated at the confluence of the Killey and Kenai Rivers. The land is now owned by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service (USFWS) and the Alaska Department of Natural Resources (DNR). Approximately 3,910 acres will be owned and managed by USFWS as part of the Kenai National Wildlife Refuge, and approximately 380 acres will be owned and managed by DNR in alignment with the Kenai River Special Use Area.

The Killey River land transaction is the result of a unique alliance among CIRI, an Alaska-based trustee council, the State of Alaska and the federal government. The decision to sell the land was made after extensive review and consideration by the CIRI Board, which strives to balance the interests of current and future generations of Shareholders while maximizing growth and revenue. All parties are aligned in their collective mission to protect critical lands and waters, provide greater access to nature, strengthen local economies and enhance climate resiliency.

The Killey River land represents one of the longest stretches of undeveloped land along the Kenai River. Since the health of the Kenai River and its salmon runs are intertwined, it is crucial that land along the riverbank remain undeveloped. Alaska Native people rely on subsistence fishing for sustenance and to maintain their cultural traditions. While the Killey River land is now managed by USFWS and DNR, CIRI and Tribal access for investigating and preserving cultural resources remains a priority.

The sale of the Killey River land was part of a phased transaction that included a previous exchange and sale of other CIRI lands on the Kenai Peninsula, and which helped facilitate what is often referred to as the Cooper Landing bypass project. Selecting an alternative route to the existing Sterling Highway was controversial, and took years to accomplish due to the sensitivity to the area's cultural sites, salmon habitat, community concerns and the need to improve highway safety. A realigned Sterling Highway would avoid much of the congestion surrounding the Russian River campground and ferry. Once constructed, it would also greatly improve driver and pedestrian safety.

The route eventually settled upon, deemed the Juneau Creek Alternative, diverts traffic away from the river and reduces potential negative impacts. However, the Juneau Creek Alternative required critical acreage necessary for the highway realignment to be freed of its wilderness designation.

CIRI and the federal government recognized this need and believed a congressional settlement of CIRI's land selection issues would be the vehicle to accomplish both party's goals. CIRI's newly acquired lands, freed from their wilderness designation, were a critical step in the construction of the Juneau Creek Alternative.

Having been personally involved in making and managing CIRI's Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act (ANCSA) land selections for many years, I know CIRI does not take the sale of our ANCSA land lightly. Careful consideration is given by CIRI management and the Board for any sale of land, especially in the case of sale of the Killey River land.

CIRI recognized early on that our original land selection was in jeopardy of being denied due to the intense desire to maintain public ownership. CIRI viewed this as an opportunity to strategize and settle our land selections in a broader way that honors CIRI's rights to land under ANCSA, while at the same time providing benefits for the greater Alaska community. While it may have taken decades to get to this point, we can be proud of CIRI's resilience and our contribution to the stewardship of lands through conservation and the preservation of culture and history, all while receiving a fair value for the sale. I believe this makes the Killey River land sale a win-win for all involved.

2024 TAX INFORMATION

CIRI IRS Form 1099s for the 2024 tax year were mailed no later than Jan. 31, 2025. Shareholders with Genek accounts may access their Form 1099 in the portal. Tax information remains accessible in Genek for seven years, allowing Shareholders to easily view and print their forms, if desired.

2024 tax forms will reflect reportable payments made to affected CIRI Shareholders in 2024. Shareholders may receive more than one type of Form 1099 depending on the type of CIRI income received. These include:

- Form 1099-MISC (resource revenue payments and prizes): Resource revenue—or 7(j)—payments derive from resource revenue sharing obligations among the 12 land-based Alaska Native regional corporations, as required by the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act (ANCSA). Shareholders who owned at-large stock on March 22, 2024, received a $11.0212 per at-large share (or $1,102.12 per 100 shares) 7(j) payment from CIRI in 2024. Additionally, if you inherited at-large stock in 2024 and received an estate settlement payment, a portion of that payment may have included held 7(j) funds.
- Resource revenue payments are reported in Box 3 – Other Income on Form 1099-MISC. ANCSA requires that resource revenue amounts distributed in connection with CIRI village-class stock be paid to the associated village; therefore, CIRI does not report these payments as individual Shareholder income. Shareholder prizes are also reported in Box 3 – Other Income on Form 1099-MISC.
- Form 1099-DIV (estate payments): If you inherited CIRI shares in 2024, any held dividends paid by CIRI in connection with the inherited shares will be reported in Boxes 1a – Ordinary Dividends and 1b – Qualified Dividends on Form 1099-DIV. If you have held your shares for less than one year, please consult your tax advisor regarding the proper treatment of qualified dividends.

2024 CST PAYMENTS ARE NONTAXABLE

The quarterly payments issued in 2024 from the CIRI Settlement Trust (CST) Distribution Fund and the CST Elders Fund are nontaxable; thus, tax forms will not be issued, and the payments will not be reported to the IRS.

Please note that it is your responsibility to accurately report your CIRI income on your tax returns; CIRI cannot provide tax advice. The proper IRS forms and schedules to use when completing individual tax returns may vary depending on the types of CIRI payments received. Shareholders are encouraged to consult with a tax advisor regarding individual circumstances and applicable federal and state tax requirements. The deadline to file 2024 taxes is Tuesday, April 15, 2025.

ELDER DISTRIBUTIONS

Quarterly Elders Fund distributions of $450 are paid to the beneficiaries of the CST who are original CIRI Shareholders and alive and 65 years of age or older on the approved dates of record, providing they either own at least one share of CIRI stock or gifted all their CIRI stock prior to July 31, 2003. Distribution dates, amounts and other relevant deadlines for 2025 are as follows:

RESOURCE REVENUE DISTRIBUTION

For Shareholders who own at-large shares and have a valid mailing address on file, resource revenue payments will be mailed or directly deposited April 1. Resource revenue payments for Shareholders who own village-class shares are mailed directly to their village corporations, as required by ANCSA. Information on the type of stock owned is available in the Qenek portal.

Resource revenue payments are made in accordance with Section 7(j) of ANCSA, which directs the sharing of resource revenues among the 12 regional corporations within the state of Alaska. Future resource revenue distribution amounts will fluctuate based on the business decisions and operations of the other Alaska Native regional corporations.

Whether you receive a check or participate in direct deposit, any time your address changes, you must either update your address in Qenek or send a signed address change request to the Shareholder Relations department. You must also keep your address updated with the U.S. Postal Service. If your CIRI mail is returned as undeliverable, distributions will be held, interest-free, and you do not qualify to participate in any prize drawings until your address is updated. /
